Red Cross and the Armed Services

BY E. ROLAND HARRIMAN
Chairman The American National Red Cross

BIGGEST by far of all American Red Cross programs is the service provided to members of the Armed Forces, veterans, and their families. This is true from the standpoint of cost, and also the number of personnel required. Approximately 40 per cent of $85,000,000 sought by the Red Cross during its March campaign will be used for this purpose.

As with the military, the scope of Red Cross activity depends largely upon world events and forces over which we have no control. This fact, coupled with the armed forces strength of approximately 3,500,000, has made it impossible to reduce Red Cross operating costs much in the postwar years.

There is now hope that some way may be found out of the atomic impasse into which modern civilization has strayed. This is something for which we can be profoundly thankful, but until it becomes a fact, we cannot let down our guard. Also, we are told that over the next few years the United States may be able to reduce the numerical strength of its military establishment. I earnestly hope this will happen, but until it does, the Red Cross must stand ready to serve our men and women in uniform at the Armed Forces' present level.

Today the Red Cross has thousands of volunteers and a national staff of 2,660 men and women serving with the Armed

AF SELECTIONS MADE; NEW PLANS ARE AWAITED

THE Air Force this week released the names of more than 6400 lieutenants and captains selected for temporary promotion to captain and major on USAF and Components Lists. The Components selections and the first increment promotions to captain and major are published in this issue.

Meantime, officials at the Pentagon said it would be some time yet before plans are disclosed for the fiscal '55 promotions. They indicated that especially careful study will be given to reports from major commands on this year's program, in view of the fact that new procedures were used.

At the same time, they said next year's promotions will depend to a considerable extent on Congressional action on the Arends Bill and the fiscal '55 budget.

Expected to be released next month are about 600 selections to lieutenant colonel and 250 to colonel, which will complete the fiscal '54 temporary promotion program.

How many officers might be separated from Service as a result of being declared "not yet qualified" for promotion under the new system was not known. A board will be convened at Headquarters to review such names reported from the major commands.

President Issues Statement; Senator Retorts; Def. Sec'y Calls Coddling Charge 'Tommyrot'

President Eisenhower this week paid pointed tribute to the Armed Forces and asserted that no member of the Uniformed Services will be required to "violate his convictions or principles or submit to any kind of personal humiliation when testifying before Congressional committees or elsewhere."

The Chief Executive made his statement at a press conference on Wednesday in connection with the Peress case.

The Commander in Chief said he was certain that "no one in any governmental position wants to have his own utterances interpreted as questioning the lasting debt that all of us Americans owe to the officers and enlisted men and women of the Armed Services."

The President added: "In this tribute to the Services, I mean to include General (Brig. Gen. Ralph W.) Zwicker, who was decorated for gallantry in the field."

That same afternoon, Senator Joseph McCarthy (R-Wisc.) issued a retort. He charged that former Major Irving Peress

"was a sacred cow of certain Army brass," and added:

"If a stupid, arrogant or witless man in a position of power appears before our committee and is found aiding the Communist party, he will be exposed."

"The fact that he might be a general," the Senator continued, "places him in no special class so far as I am concerned."

The next day, Thursday, the scene shifted to the Pentagon where Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson met with reporters at a news conference, during which he dismissed as "damned tommyrot" allegations that the Army or the Defense Department coddles Communists.

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens had made no new comment on the situation this week, as THE JOURNAL went to press.

At the week end, the row between Secretary Stevens and Senator McCarthy which had commanded such widespread attention seemed to be growing less important than the broader question of what the Services are to do with Com-

House Group Reports Promotion Changes

Strong arguments for a better long-range promotion plan for military personnel have been voiced by the House Armed Services Committee in a report on the Arends Bill.

The proposal, HR 7103, was approved by the Committee on 17 Feb., and reported to the House last week with a recommendation that it be enacted.

In recommending approval of the measure, the House Committee said it hopes the proposed legislation "will obviate any further efforts to restrict promotions through the use of limitations on appropriation acts."

Such restrictions have created "uncertainty" and have "adversely" affected morale, the Committee reported. The new proposal will offset these ills by establishing "a reasonable long-range basis for career planning" that will not require heavy attrition rates. It will "maintain the theory of selection" and "will permit a normal flow of promotion," the report states.

Conclusions reached by the Committee are expected to dispel much of the erroneous criticism which has been leveled against military promotions.

For example, the Committee admits there are proportionately "more senior officers today" than there were at the height of WWII. But, it notes, many of the current senior billets have been created by Congress since the war's end and no comparison can be fair or accurate unless many other factors are considered.

One such factor is the technical advances which have been made in warfare. "As new technical devices and methods are developed," the Committee states, "the costs skyrocket, and the need for more senior officers increases."

Another factor is that many senior billets had to be filled during WWII by relatively junior officers simply because there were not enough officers eligible for promotion to the higher ranks. This condition, the Committee notes, no longer exists.

As a general conclusion the Committee said it found "no abuse of promotions in the Armed Forces." It noted, "in fact, the present grade distribution falls far short

Dependent Care Bill Ready For Budget

The Defense Department will send to the Budget Bureau shortly—for certain approval—legislation to improve medical care for military families through use of civilian doctors and hospitals.

President Eisenhower has said that "more generous use" should be made of dependent care benefits for Servicemen. Consequently, the BOB undoubtedly will clear the Pentagon bill for Capitol Hill action.

Long-Delayed WO Bill Begins Rolling; Holds Promise Of Brighter Promotions

Warrant officers of the military services came into their own this week as hearings opened on the long-pending proposal to set up a statutory WO career plan.

Although not a promotion bill in the true sense of the word, the measure will permit large-scale promotions to permanent WO ranks and will ease service-in-grade requirements for the Army and Air Force. It also will establish a 20-year retirement plan for WOs and will set up compulsory retirement criteria.

As the hearings got underway before the Arends Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee, Representative Arends (R-Ill.) presented a statement that the bill is "over-due, long delayed, and very much needed."

He noted that the measure, HR 6374, will affect more than 31,000 warrant officers now on duty in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Better Long-Range Promotion Plans Are Urged in House Committee Report

of actual requirements in some grades." "The general and admiral ceilings contained in the proposed legislation, while geared to long-range promotion plans, are actually based on requirements," the Committee said. "In other words, each service has indicated that its assigned mission, including the multitude of extra-curricular activities imposed upon it, completed and fully justifies the number of generals or admirals established as ceilings for each service."

The proposal does not limit the number of officers who may serve in four- and three-star rank because the committee "feels that present controls are adequate."

The bill "should be the permanent answer to the objections which have been raised in both Houses to the alleged promiscuous promotions of officers in our Armed Forces," the Committee reported.

Another conclusion reached by the Committee is expected to surprise some members of Congress who have opposed Service retirement plans.

The Committee found that the 20-year retirement plan afforded members of the military is "rarely used" and "statistics prove that it is a privilege not abused."

Retirement has been attacked from time to time by members of both Houses who believed that it was not being properly administered. At present a restriction in the appropriations act limits retirement to those who served in both World Wars, those whose retention involves undue hardship, and those who can obtain special approval from the Secretary of Defense.

This restriction will be removed by the new measure. The Committee said it "wholeheartedly endorses" the section of the bill which repeals the retirement restriction. Elimination of the restriction "now with a reasonable assurance that it will not be reenacted will do much to bolster the incentive of young men to make the service a career," the Committee said.

"The privilege of applying for retirement after 20 or more years of service is very appealing to the young second lieutenant or young ensign," the report states. "It is reassuring to him in the early stages of his career to realize that after 20 years or more of service to his country with all of the liabilities attached to being a career member of the armed services, he can apply for retirement and if his application is approved he will receive a percentage of his basic pay for the remainder of his life."

"But the interesting facts are that it is a privilege rarely used."

In the four-year period immediately preceding the Korean war, the Army, Navy and Marine Corps had only 268 voluntary retirements from among Regular officers with 20-25 years' total service. Only 23 Air Force officers with less than 25 years' service have been retired since fiscal 1950.

"Here is a benefit or a privilege," the Committee said, which is most appealing to young men about to enter the Armed Forces on a career basis, but likewise the statistics prove that it is a privilege not abused.

"There have been, and undoubtedly will be in the future, cases in which well-known service personnel will take advantage of this privilege. But the small number of people who take advantage of the privilege justifies its restoration, for so long as it exists young officers will possess the knowledge that in a few years they will have the necessary 20 years. But by the time they attain some seniority and higher grade, plus family responsibilities, the desire to take advantage of this privilege dwindles."

The Committee warns, "If the Congress opposes the privilege it should change the rules for those who contemplate making the service a career in the future, but not change the rules for those who have had this benefit held out to them as one of the incentives for making a career of the armed services."

The importance of the proposed legislation was summed up by the Committee in these words:

"Promotion is one of the most complex and yet one of the most important aspects of military life. And limitations, hastily prepared, can so seriously affect career planning in the Armed Forces that their continuation over any period of time may bring about consequences not contemplated nor desired by those who propose such limitations."

"Promotion must be geared to the needs of each service and at the same time must fit personnel plans for years to come. It cannot be operated on a hit-and-miss basis subject to a different numerical limitation imposed each fiscal year. Promotion must be related to requirements, and it must also be flexible enough to permit consideration of eligible officers upon the completion of normal years of service in grade. . . .

"It must be borne in mind that promotion is an incentive for better performance. It is the method by which the officer realizes that he is doing his job and doing it well. It is the method by which he attains responsibility and more pay for that responsibility. It is a method by which he knows what the future holds for him provided he continues to do more than is required of him."

Army Goes To Field, Wants NCO Reaction

The Army has launched a field survey—to be completed by 15 March—to obtain from at least 200 officers and 1,000 NCO's in each major command their reaction to the NCO Specialist Plan.

Originally, the Army had intended to start as of 1 Jan. 1954 a program whereby enlisted men would be separated into NonComs and Specialists. This was postponed and decision was made to hold off the start until it could be made simultaneously with changes in MOS's and T/O&E's, probably around September.

As was the case with the recently Uniform Preference Survey, the Army now wants to obtain from the field the reaction to the plan. It would set up grades of master specialist, comparable to master sergeant, specialist first class, specialist second class and specialist third class, and which would grade for distinctive insignia.

UK to Strengthen RAF in Bombers. Cut Army, Maintain Navy's Force

The United Kingdom's defense policy will be based on greater emphasis on the Royal Air Force, for which they will build "as soon as possible" a force of modern bombers capable of using the atomic weapon "to the fullest extent."

This is the high point of a White Paper presented by the British Minister of Defense to Parliament recently. Concerning the Army and Navy, the White Paper said:

"Expenditures on the Army will tend to decline, though the extent of the decline will to a large extent depend upon the commitments which the Army, as an instrument of government policy, has to meet."

"The necessity for proper defense of our sea communications makes it unlikely that expenditure on the Royal Navy can be reduced much below its present level."

The White Paper announced that during 1954-55 the total active strengths of the Navy and Air Force are expected to remain broadly constant; that of the Army is expected to decrease by about 13,000. An expected increase of about 6,000 in the Regular Army will be off-set by a reduction of some 19,000 national servicemen (equivalent to U. S. selective service).

Air Force

The Air Force, the White Paper said, will concentrate on modernization and expansion in the UK and Western Europe, while maintaining forces "of high quality" in the Middle and Far East. "The jet medium bomber squadrons will be built up as early as production allows with the aim of providing a highly trained and flexible force for the exercise of air power."

The Air Force strength (in thousands) was given, as of 1 April in each year, as follows:

	1953	1954	1955
Regular	188.9	187.7	191.2
Nat. Service	78.1	69.9	68.4
Women	10.1	9.7	9.6
Totals	277.1	267.3	269.2

Army

As to the Army the Minister of Defense said: "The number of front-line formations in the active Army will, within the limits imposed by our overseas commitments and our obligations to our allies, be somewhat reduced. This will be accompanied by a more than proportionate reduction in administrative and supporting units. At the same time the aim will be to build up a strategic reserve at home, thus incidentally bringing the proportions of home and overseas service into better balance. The process of re-equipping the active Army will continue. The re-equipment program for the reserve Army will be concentrated on those formations which would be the first to be mobilized and to go into action."

The Army strength (in thousands) was given, as of 1 April in each year, as follows:

	1953	1954	1955
Regular	211.3	220.1	226.4
Nat. Service	228.0	224.0	204.5
Women	9.1	9.1	9.2
Totals	448.4	453.2	440.1

Navy

"The Royal Navy," it was stated, "will continue to concentrate on building up and modernizing its anti-submarine and anti-mine forces and on the completion of aircraft carriers now under construction. These carriers will be fitted with the angled deck which will enable them to operate efficiently high performance naval aircraft."

The Navy strength (in thousands) was given, as of 1 April in each year, as follows:

	1953	1954	1955
Regular	133.7	121.7	119.2
Nat. Service	6.7	8.2	10.6
Women	5.2	5.1	5.2
Totals	145.6	135.0	135.0

Career Problems

Like the U. S. Forces, the British services are having difficulties attracting and holding sufficient regular career men. "There will have to be an improvement in all three Services in the numbers of men prolonging their current engagements if the increasing shortage of NCO's and skilled tradesmen is to be made good and the operational mobility and technical efficiency of the Services maintained," the White Paper said.

The British also are having similar troubles with doctors and dentists "because of the continuing decline in the numbers of applicants for regular commissions as medical and dental officers."

Accordingly a special committee has been set up under the chairmanship of Lord Waverly "To review the arrangements for providing medical and dental services for the armed forces at home and abroad in peace and war."

A-BOMB COULD BRING "BROKEN-BACKED" WAR

The new British White Paper presented to Parliament by the Minister of Defense discusses as follows the probable nature of a future global war in which both sides would possess the atomic bomb:

"If by some miscalculation in Communist policy or by deliberate design, a global war were to be forced upon us, it must be assumed that atomic weapons would be employed by both sides. In this event it seems likely that such a war would begin with a period of intense atomic attacks lasting a relatively short time but inflicting great destruction and damage. If no decisive result were reached in this opening phase, hostilities would decline in intensity, though perhaps less so at sea than elsewhere, and a period of 'broken-back' warfare would follow, during which the opposing sides would seek to recover their strength, carrying on the struggle in the meantime as best they might."

"Such a prospect emphasises yet again the prime necessity of basing our defense policy upon the prevention of war. It also makes clear the need to keep the lead which we now hold in technical development on which we must rely to offset the preponderance of the Communist States in manpower. Our active forces must be able to withstand the initial shock. Our reserve forces must be capable of rapid mobilization behind the shield which our active forces provide and be ready to perform their combat tasks at the earliest possible moment."

TWO ARMY LIEUTENANT GENERALS RETIRE

DISTINGUISHED military careers ended on 28 Feb. for Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army CG, a 1915 West Point classmate of President Eisenhower, and for Lt. Gen. Reuben L. Jenkins, who rose from the ranks to important commands in Europe and Korea.

General Swing, who was 60 on the day of his retirement, activated and commanded the 11th Airborne Division in WWII and in December 1943 planned and conducted the first airlift of an entire division by planes and gliders and directed a maneuver where the first mass landing of parachutists and glider troops at night was achieved.

He led the division in action in the Pacific, where it won honors in the Philippines. He led the first airborne units to Japan. Before taking command of the Sixth Army on 1 Aug. 1951, General Swing commanded the Ft. Sill, Okla. Artillery Center and the Army War College.

General Jenkins, 57, recognized as the father of the Army OCS program, was responsible for expansion of the Officer Corps from 80,000 in 1941 to more than 500,000 in 1943. As a member of President Eisenhower's headquarters in North Africa, he helped plan and carry out landings at Salerno and Anzio and the campaign of the Garigliano River.

General Jenkins returned to the U. S. in July, 1945, for assignment as G-3 at Army Ground Forces headquarters (now Army Field Forces), Ft. Monroe, Va. In June, 1946, he went to Bikini, to witness the first atom bomb test. He served as chief of operations for General James A. Van Fleet in the fight against Communist infiltration in Greece in 1949-1951 and became chief of the Greek mission when Van Fleet moved to Korea. General Van Fleet later requested General Jenkins' assignment to Korea, where the retiring general was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. Since returning from Korea, General Jenkins has been a patient at the Ft. Benning Hospital.

General and Mrs. Jenkins reside at 1923 Wells Drive, Columbus, Ga. General and Mrs. Swing will live in San Francisco.

Defense Secretary Tells Senate Chairman "Communists" Pose Need For Legal Changes

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson says there is an "immediate and pressing need" for clarification of current laws concerning military personnel who are Communists or other men who "prove not to be suitable to serve in the Armed Forces in the service of their country."

The Secretary's letter of 3 March came in response from a communication written the day before by Chairman Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass) of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Last week's issue of The Journal pointed out the dilemma which confronts military officials in handling personnel who either are Communists or who plead the Constitutional privilege of the Fifth Amendment.

The article said that a study had been initiated at the order of Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens by The Judge Advocate General of the Army.

Mr. Wilson's letter to Senator Saltonstall shows that the study is on a Defense Department level.

Meantime, the Defense Department, apparently as a "stop-gap" step, sent to the Budget Bureau a proposed amendment to the Doctor Draft Act of 1950 which would add this proviso:

"any person heretofore or hereafter inducted or ordered to active duty under the authority of this act who fails to qualify for, or to accept, a commission or whose commission is terminated may be utilized in his professional capacity in an enlisted grade or rank."

The amendment is intended, according to Assistant Defense Secretary Fred A. Seaton, who is in charge of Legislative Affairs, "to remove any doubt that may exist as to the authority of the Armed Forces to retain and utilize in a professional capacity in an enlisted grade or rank any physician, dentist or person in an allied specialist category who has been inducted or ordered to active duty under the so-called Doctors Draft Act."

Necessity for the legislation arose from a Federal court decision that the Army must use in officer rank medical personnel brought into Service under the Doctor Draft Act.

CAPITOL HEARS SEC DEF OKs PAY HIKE

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has changed his mind and now favors a pay raise for military personnel, according to Representative Bob Wilson (R-Calif.), who has sponsored military pay raise legislation.

Representative Wilson, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, told THE JOURNAL he understands the Defense Department "is now seriously considering" support for a pay raise.

Both Representative Wilson a WWII Infantry private and Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa), Captain USNR, have introduced bills to tie military pay to the cost-of-living index. Mr. Wilson said he is "very anxious" to see a military pay increase approved, especially one that would take into account the "ups and downs of living costs."

There were reports at the Pentagon that Secretary Wilson has requested a new review of the Hook Commission report which formed the basis for the Career Compensation Act of 1949. The Commission recommended at that time pay increases substantially higher than were voted by Congress.

Defense officials are said to be concerned because of the diminishing spread in the pay scales between bottom and top enlisted and officer ranks. This was cited by the Womble Committee at the conclusion of its study on career attractions. Representative Wilson said he understood the changed attitude of Secretary Wilson resulted from the recent Administration proposal to increase salaries of Federal employees. This previously was reported in THE JOURNAL.

Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah has been the prime mover in getting other Defense officials to change their mind about a pay raise.

It has been stated that Secretary Wilson informed his Administration colleagues he would not sit by and permit other Federal employees to receive a new cost-of-living pay adjustment without similar benefits for men and women in uniform.

For the record, however, the Defense chief has said only that the pay situation is "under study."

Most observers feel that unless the pay legislation is submitted to Congress within the next few weeks its chances of enactment will be jeopardized because of the election year rush for adjournment.

Key man at the Capitol in any pay raise legislation will be Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo), whose House Armed Services Committee would handle such a measure. He has indicated that he is not enthusiastic for a pay raise at this time, contending that other steps should be taken to raise career attractiveness. However, Mr. Short, like Secretary Wilson, conceivably might change his mind in view of the proposed increase for other Federal employees.

THE following are the names of the 1380 Air Force first lieutenants whose promotion to temporary captain was announced on 1 March.

They were included on a list of 3963 first lieutenants selected for higher rank. Top man on the selection list has a 5 May 1945 date of rank as first lieutenant. No. 1380 has a 14 Aug. 1950 DR, with No. 1381's DR a day later. The last man on the list, No. 3963, has a 17 Dec. 1952 DR.

By year, the dates of rank as first lieutenants were as follows: '45 through No. 2; '46 through 9; '47 through 21; '48 through 52; '49 through 206; '50 through 2787; '51 through 3854 and '52 the remainder on the selection list.

The Air Force promotion message gave the following dates of rank and changes in the selection list, as originally made available to major commands.

1 Mar 54: No 1 only. 3 Mar 54: No 3 through 9. No 2 Druckenbrodt moved to No 1679½ with DR 11 Sep 50. 5 Mar 54: No 10 through 21. 9 Mar 54: No 22 through 52. 11 Mar 54: No 53 through 206. No 98, Porftit, moved to No 708½ w/DR 4 Jun 52. 15 Mar 54: No 207 through 1380.

The list as published below shows some blank spaces. This results from deaths and other deletions following initial distribution of the list.

Subsequent promotion to captain will be made as follows: 15 Apr 54: No 1381 through 2787. 13 May 54: No 2788 through 3854. 14 May 54: No 3855 through 3963.

Army Plans To Promote "Many" WOJGs If New Warrant Officer Bill Is Approved

"Many" Army junior grade warrant officers serving in pay grade W-1 will be boosted to higher permanent grades when the new warrant officer bill becomes law.

Plans for the "vitalized" Army warrant officer program were detailed this week before the Arends Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee.

Hearings on the long-pending measure, HR 6374, got underway on 3 March and were continuing as THE JOURNAL went to press.

Lt. Col. J. N. Davis, USA, Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, outlined the manner in which the Army will implement the bill if it is approved by the Congress.

He said "many" of the Army's WOJGs in pay grade W-1 will be redistributed "into higher permanent grades." The Army suspended promotions for these officers some four years ago when legislative action first commenced on the warrant officer bill.

The W-1s who will be redistributed into higher permanent WO grades include WOJGs who have in excess of 13 years' warrant officer service.

The bill reduces from 10 to three years the length of time which a WOJG (W-1) must serve in grade. Additionally, it provides for promotion to W-3 after nine years and to W-4 after 15 years of service.

Colonel Davis noted: "In the past, failure of selection has not resulted directly in elimination. Under this bill retirement or separation will be the consequence of two failures of selection. This bill provides for the payment of severance pay to warrant officers for the first time. Those who do not elect to reenlist, if separated after three years' warrant officer service, will be given severance pay."

The proposal also provides:

1—Retirement will be permissive for all warrant officers after 20 years' active service and mandatory for Regular Army WO's upon completion of 30 unless the individual applies for and the Army Secretary approves retention for a period not extending more than 60 days beyond the individual's 60th birthday.

2—Retirement at age 60 will be mandatory for all WO's.

3—Regular Army WO's will be permitted to serve as commissioned officers without being discharged from their WO status.

4—WO's, after the effective date of the bill, will not be appointed reserve commissioned officers. Those now holding reserve commissions will not lose them.

Colonel Davis said the proposal "will provide a uniform statutory career plan for warrant officers . . . which will permit the services to administer their warrant officers on a basis that will insure orderly promotion by selection, separation of unsatisfactory personnel and retirement, in a manner which is fair and equitable among themselves and in relation to the career opportunities which are provided for commissioned officer personnel."

Maj. Gen. John A. Klein O.K.'d As New Army A.G.

The Senate this week set the stage for Maj. Gen. John A. Klein, USA, Deputy Adjutant General, to move up to the top A.G. post on 31 May when Maj. Gen. William E. Bergin retires.

General Klein's nomination was confirmed by the Senate following routine Armed Services Committee consideration.

The nomination was made far in advance of his taking office to permit printing of forms and other administrative work necessary when a new Adjutant General is appointed.

Two Former USMA Grid Coaches Named For New Posts; 3-Star To The Point

Two former West Point football coaches have been named for important new assignments by Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens.

Lt. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, CG of I Corps in Korea, will succeed retiring Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving as Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy next fall.

Maj. Gen. Garrison H. Davidson, Senior Army Member of the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group in the Office of the Defense Secretary, will replace Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hodes as Commandant of the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.

Lt. Gen. Bryan

General Bryan — the Pentagon said he will be the first three-star Superintendent in Academy history — was assistant during football seasons at West Point from 1927 to 1932 and was assistant football coach from March 1934 until August 1935.

General Davidson, who was graduated in 1927, was head football coach there from October 1932 until June 1938. It's interesting to note that General Bryan commanded the 24th Infantry Division in Korea and that General Davidson was assistant commander of the 24th during the early days of the Korean War.

General Hodes will leave the U. S. about 23 March for Europe, where it is reported he will be given command of VII Corps, filling a post vacated by Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, expected to be given new duty as the Army G-3.

General Irving, who will be 60 in September, will retire at the end of that month after more than 37 years' service. He has been USMA Superintendent since February 1951.

Shift 4 M.G.'s; Gen. Gavin New G-3; Gen. Harper to Be Benning Commander

Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, VII Corps CG in Germany, will become Army G-3 next month and in the summer Maj. Gen. Joseph H. Harper, CG of the 4th Infantry Division in Germany, will take command of the Infantry Center at Ft. Benning, Ga.

General Gavin will replace Maj. Gen. Clyde D. Eddleman, who has been G-3 since August 1952.

General Harper will succeed Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, jr., who was made Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School in October 1951 and Commandant in January 1953, and whose new assignment will be in Europe.

Presumably, one of the two generals going to Europe will take command of the 4th Infantry Division.

General Gavin, who will be 47 on 22 March, is a 1929 West Point graduate. General Eddleman, 52 last 17 Jan., was graduated from West Point in 1924.

General Harper, who will be 53 on 1 May, is a graduate of the University of Delaware who entered the Army in January 1923. He served in Europe during WWII with the 101st Airborne Division as a Glider Infantry Regimental Commander.

General Meloy, 50, is a 1927 West Point graduate, who was chief of staff of the 103d Infantry Division in WWII and who was wounded during the first days of fighting in Korea.

munists or persons who plead the Fifth Amendment.

Mr. Wilson told his news conference that he has organized a Task Force on a wider than single Service basis to look into the Peress case and to ascertain what errors had been made and how they can be avoided in the future.

President Eisenhower on Wednesday had opened his news conference statement with the declaration that "the Department of the Army made serious errors in handling the Peress case and the Secretary of the Army so stated publicly, almost a month ago."

In this connection, Mr. Wilson said that "there are a wonderful group of men in the Army," but observed that the Army "is much better organized to fight in the field than to operate in peacetime."

On the specific issue of Communists in uniform, Mr. Wilson said "I don't want them in the Army, or any of the Services."

He said, however, that it is a problem because men should not be allowed to dodge the draft.

The Secretary gave no clear-cut answer to the problem.

Asked if he thought former Major Peress should have received other than an honorable discharge, the Secretary responded that he could not pass judgment until he sees the complete record. He said that he has not read the record of testimony given by General Zwicker before the McCarthy Subcommittee.

Mr. Wilson told newsmen he always believes in treating people courteously, and noted that there is a "general impression he (Zwicker) was not treated as courteously as he was entitled."

ARMY G-2 CHIEF REPORTS ON "POTENT WEAPON"

Next week's issue of THE JOURNAL will publish a specially prepared article on Military Intelligence by the Army's G-2, Maj. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau. Describing Intelligence as a "commander's potent weapon," General Trudeau will report on steps being taken to enhance career prospects of intelligence officers. His article on a subject usually cloaked in secrecy reflects current determination at the highest levels of the Army to raise the prestige of G-2 assignments at all echelons.

The Red Cross and the Armed Forces

Forces here and overseas. About 850 of the staff are on duty in the Far East, Europe and other parts of the world where our troops are stationed. Their efforts are augmented by the volunteers in chapters and in military and VA hospitals. There are about 100 volunteers for every paid worker in the Red Cross.

A primary responsibility of the organization under its congressional charter, the Red Cross program of Services to the Armed Forces and Veterans includes:

Aid to servicemen, veterans and their families in solving personal and family problems.

Financial assistance in emergencies.

Help with communications between servicemen and their families.

Providing home conditions reports for servicemen upon request.

Recreation in military hospitals.

Voluntary help in VA hospital activities for patients.

Help in applying for government benefits and in developing and presenting veterans' claims.

In addition to the above services, the Red Cross, in response to specific military request, recently inaugurated recreation activities in Korea, North Africa and in France. This supplementary recreation program in Korea involves 27 clubmobiles that tour isolated military units to provide recreation and leisure time activities. Recreation centers are also being opened in Chateauroux, France, and in Port Lyautey and Marrakech, North Africa. In both instances this Red Cross activity is closely coordinated with Special Services and the Office of Community Services. About 100 Red Cross girls are engaged in this work.

During the last fiscal year, the Red Cross spent $35,147,100 in providing its regular services to the Armed Forces and veterans. The supplementary recreation program will cost another million and a half.

During 1952-53 Red Cross workers at military posts and hospitals helped a monthly average of 117,200 servicemen and provided $6,736,300 in financial assistance. Home Service workers in the 3,700 Red Cross chapters helped a monthly average of 105,200 service families and provided $3,735,200 for emergency financial needs and basic maintenance.

Red Cross staff at VA offices helped 20,000 veterans' families with claims each month and chapters assisted 27,400 veterans' families monthly. Volunteers serving patients in VA hospitals gave 3,024,600 hours of service.

Servicemen, veterans and their families also benefited heavily from the Red Cross blood program. An average of 171,000 pints were collected monthly for defense

DRIVE IS ON

THE JOURNAL is pleased to publish this special report by the Chairman of the American Red Cross and joins with President Eisenhower and Defense Secretary Wilson in saluting the work of the Red Cross in its global, around-the-clock assistance to members of the Armed Forces and to their families.

In the weeks ahead, we shall carry stories from all parts of the world telling how Servicemen and their families are aiding the Red Cross Campaign.

purposes and 148,000 for civilian use during 1953. Whole blood and plasma saved countless lives in Korea. In addition the Red Cross supplied 9,000,000 cubic centimeters of gamma globulin to the Office of Defense Mobilization for use in the fight against polio, measles and infectious jaundice.

Other Red Cross programs also benefit the military community. Many members of the armed forces and their families, here and overseas, receive instruction in first aid and water safety. During 1952-53, 20,000 certificates were issued to military personnel completing standard first aid courses. Another 52,000 completed water safety courses. A total of 864,500 first aid and 891,200 water safety certificates were awarded.

Basic and advanced Red Cross courses in survival swimming are taught at a number of military installations, as well as in schools and colleges, for persons near military age. Purpose of this special course is to teach men how to stay afloat in time of emergency.

Red Cross disaster aid reached 25,200 families—many of them service or veteran—in 319 disaster relief operations. The organization spent nearly $6,800,000 on disaster relief and preparedness in 1952-53.

All Red Cross service is, of course, free of charge. The only "product" the American Red Cross has to offer is "service" and that is always furnished free in the true spirit of "people helping people."

WO Officers Career Plan Heard in House

It also applies to Reserve, National Guard and retired warrant officers.

Mr. Arends complimented the Services for successfully packaging the various warrant officer systems into one unit, and he praised the Coast Guard Warrant Officers Association which, he noted, has "been spark plugging this bill for a long time."

The first witness to appear in support of the WO career plan was Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah. He said it has the solid backing of the Defense Department.

Doctor Hannah added that the bill "represents extensive study which has taken place during the last several years in an effort to come up with a warrant officer program which would be fair and workable, and achieve the maximum uniformity possible." He said it provides a statutory career plan for WOs "which is similar to that provided for commissioned officers."

Explaining the bill, Representative Arends noted that it "will not result in wholesale promotions among the various warrant officers" and "is not intended to bring about that result." He said many WOs serving in temporary grades will, when redistributed under the proposal, receive permanent grades probably "no higher than their present temporary grade."

The measure, he said, is designed to establish a career program which:

1—Sets time in grade requirements as follows: "three years in grade as W-1, six years as a W-2, six years as a W-3 and eventual retirement as a W-5."

2—Establishes as grades "and not just as pay grades, the warrant officer grades of W-1, W-2, W-3, and W-4."

3—Provides for redesignation and redistribution of all warrant officers serving on active duty as well as those now retired.

4—Permits WOs to be appointed in any permanent WO grade in the Regular Service, but only after one year of service in the case of the Army and Air Force.

5—Provides a "fully qualified" basis for promotion from W-1 to W-2.

6—Provides a "best qualified" basis for promotion from W-2 to W-3 and from W-3 to W-4.

7—Establishes the principle of forced attrition for those who fail to be selected by two promotion boards.

8—Permits retirement after 20 years' of active service.

9—Makes retirement mandatory upon completion of 30 years' service, with certain exceptions.

strong opposition is foreseen from the American Medical Association. This group has consistently opposed any extension of family care benefits and some of its leading spokesmen have challenged existing dependent care programs.

The Defense bill will contain basic recommendations of the civilian Moulton Commission on Dependent Care, highlighted by use of civilian doctors and medical facilities.

The measure will prescribe minimum payments that must be made by dependents for medical care when civilian care is given. This is seen as necessary to prevent any abuse of the privilege.

It can be taken for granted that the dependent care bill will have strong support from the Defense Department and all the Services, whose leaders consider the family medical care problem one of the most pertinent issues in the campaign to raise Service attractiveness.

The Armed Services Committees, on the basis of past performance, can be expected to give sympathetic consideration to legislation improving family medical care.

However, the Moulton proposals will cost money—perhaps $50-$70 million a year, and this means that action will be necessary by the Appropriations Committee.

Here is where the American Medical Association might likely fire its heaviest artillery.

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Navy And Marine Corps WOs Will Not Be Redistributed Under New Proposal

No redistribution of Navy and Marine Corps warrant officers will be necessary as a result of the new warrant officer bill it was learned this week.

As the Arends House Armed Services Subcommittee opened hearings on the much delayed measure, it was brought out that promotions for Navy and Marine Corps officers also will be little affected by the measure.

One of the major changes, according to Comdr. G. D. Williams, Bureau of Naval Personnel, will be the appointment "for the first time" of warrant officers and chief warrant officers, as such, in the Navy. Chief warrant officers will be those commissioned in pay grades W-2, W-3, and W-4.

Negligible Effect

He said this action "in a legal sense . . . is a fundamental change" but in practical application "it will have negligible effect on the employment of the individuals concerned."

Navy warrant officers in pay grades above W-1 will continue to be issued commissions while those in the lower pay grade will receive warrants.

Of the 2,596 permanent warrant officers in the Navy, 1,855 currently are serving under temporary appointments in grades of ensign. Additionally, there are 5,062 temporary warrant officers on duty in the Navy whose permanent status is enlisted.

Primary Changes

Commander Williams pointed out that the new proposal affects Navy warrant officers primarily in military designation, in promotional attrition and mandatory separation, and in retirement privileges and requirements. He said, "It does not change the rate of advancement now in effect but gives it statutory force."

The new forced attrition provision, he said, "will provide incentive for superior performance and a means of elimination of sub-standard warrant officers, similar in general aspects to the selection processes imposed on commissioned officers."

Marine Corps representatives were still to be heard by the Committee as THE JOURNAL went to press but it was learned that no redistribution will be necessary in the Marine Corps as a result of the proposal.

WO Titles To Be Cut, LDO Program Changed

A study board, headed by RAdm. E. W. Grenfell, USN, has completed its survey and made recommendations concerning the status of Limited Duty Officers and Warrant Officers.

The board's major recommendations have been approved for implementation by VAdm. James L. Holloway, Jr., USN, Chief of Naval Personnel.

The major recommendation was to reduce the number of Warrant Officer categories from 37 to 24. Fourteen titles were eliminated and one title — "Mine Warfare Technician" — was added. The "Aviation Boatswain" title was changed to "Aviation Operations Technician" and the "Aviation Machinist" title was changed to "Aviation Maintenance Technician."

Limited Duty Officer categories were increased from 12 to 13; the title "Aerology" was added.

The board recommended that the age limit for Warrant Officers be raised to 40 for those now in service who enlisted prior to 30 Sept. 1945. The 35 year-old limitation will be retained for those who enlisted after that date and who had not yet reached the age of 35 on the 1st of January in the year their appointment became effective.

In the future, those who are appointed to the LDO program will be required to attend an indoctrination school similar to the present Officer Candidate School. Competitive exams, after the qualifications for the 24 warrant officer categories are announced, will be required for initial advancement to warrant.

Twelve Warrant Officer categories for which no billets are currently written will be eliminated with the exception of Bandmaster and Hospital Corps, Dental Clerk.

The Board also determined that Warrant Photographers in addition to all other warrant categories will be allowed to apply for any LDO category he desires.

U. S. AIR FORCE

AF Tells W.O. Perm. Ranks Plans, Spells Out Criteria At Capitol Session

Air Force warrant officers will receive permanent grades "at least as high" as those they received during the initial distribution in June 1950 under terms of the new Warrant Officer Bill.

This plan was outlined before the Arends Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee as hearings opened 3 March on the long-delayed bill, HR 6374.

Lt. Col. Joseph R. Brantley, USAF, Office of the Director of Personnel Planning, said WOs will be awarded permanent grades "higher" than those received in June 1950 if they currently are serving in the higher pay grade and meet certain active service criteria. The criteria, he said, will be as follows:

WO-W-1—less than 13 years.
CWO-W-2—13 years but less than 19.
CWO-W-3—19 years but less than 25.
CWO-W-4—25 or more years.

"In applying this criteria," Colonel Brantley said, "we do not plan to award any warrant officer a permanent grade more than one grade higher than that which he received on the initial distribution in 1950." He also said:

1—AF Reserve warrant officers will be redistributed in accordance with the same general plan as Regulars.

2—Each ANG warrant officer will be redistributed into a statutory grade corresponding to his present pay grade.

3—Each temporary WO will be redistributed into a statutory grade corresponding to his present pay grade.

Colonel Brantley noted that the mandatory promotion and attrition provisions of the WO bill will, for the first time provide a basis for building a vitalized Regular warrant officer structure in which there is prescribed progression and forced attrition.

The Air Force, he said, favors the section of the bill which states that WOs may, upon application and in the discretion of the secretary concerned, be retired after 20 years' active service in the permanent WO grade held on the day before the date of retirement or in any higher WO grade in which satisfactorily served.

AF warrant officer strength on 1 Jan. included 3,555 on active duty (917 Regulars; 2,638 temporary). Of this number, 1,749 or approximately 50 per cent are serving in the upper three pay grades and the remaining 1,806 are serving in the lowest pay grade.

In addition, the AF has 1,200 active duty master sergeants who hold Reserve appointments as WO(jg)s, and 1,333 Reserve commissioned officers on active duty who have a permanent WO status.

Awards To Air Generals

Legion of Merit awards were presented recently to two generals stationed at Mitchel AFB, N. Y.

Maj. Gen. George G. Finch, Deputy for Air National Guard Affairs of the Continental Air Command, received the award for "outstanding service" while assigned as principal Air Force advisor to the U. N. Command Armistice Delegation during the Korean truce negotiations.

The First Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit was awarded to Maj. Gen. Howard M. Turner, Commander of the First Air Force, for "performance of outstanding service as Commander of the Philippines Command Air Force and 13th Air Force during 1950-51."

Ed. F. Hogan to Handle AFA's Reserve Affairs

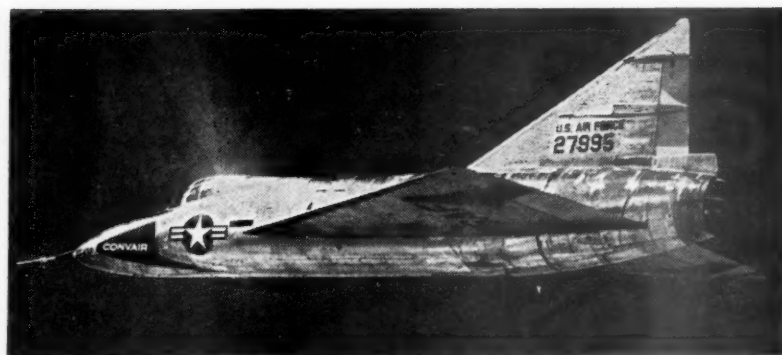

The Air Force Association announced the appointment this week of Edmund F. Hogan as Assistant for Reserve affairs in the Association. His primary duties will be to "coordinate and execute plans, policies and directives pertaining to Air Reserve and Air National Guard matters."

A veteran newspaperman, Mr. Hogan served during WWII with the Mediterranean Editions of Stars and Stripes, and worked closely with the 12th and 15th Air Forces. He later volunteered for assignment to the Far East and was associated with the 14th and 5th Air Forces. Following the war, he became the first editor of the National Guard-Reserve edition of Army Times.

In 1947, he became a member of the Headquarters Staff of the National Guard Association. He went to the Far East as a correspondent shortly after the Korean War began, and was recalled in Feb. 1951, for two years of active duty with the Air Force.

He was assigned public information officer of the 113th Fighter-Bomber Wing, the D. C. Air National Guard unit, then was promoted to Assistant Public Information Officer of Eastern Air Defense Force. He completed this tour of duty as Associate Editor of Flying Safety Magazine. Since April 1953, he has served as a consultant to Headquarters, USAF. He also was associated with a private advertising agency in New York.

You'll get special attention from Journal advertisers—they cater to Service personnel.

FLIGHT TEST at Edwards AFB, Calif., of the Air Force's new supersonic delta wing interceptor, the F-102, built by Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation. The initial prototype of the F-102 was damaged in an emergency landing last November. The second prototype has been under test at Edwards since mid-December. Exterior photographs were released this week for the first time.

MAY SPEED PROMOTIONS FOR MANY AIRMEN

The Air Force has taken action to authorize accelerated promotions as airmen for thousands of former officers and warrant officers now serving in airmen status.

Dispatched to the field was AIMA/JCOM 395/54 which says that time in grade requirements may be waived at discretion of promotion authority for promotion to next higher grade and subsequent grade airmen who have served on extended active duty in commissioned or warrant officer status.

This policy change will be included in a forthcoming revision of AFR 39-29, the Air Force message said.

During recent months, considerable numbers of officers who were released from extended active duty because of the "RIF" program have elected to remain in active service as airmen.

1,380 Lts. Promoted to Temp. Cpts.

Air Force To Track Moon's Shadow At 3,000 MPH

The Air Force will participate in the most extensive study of a solar eclipse ever planned.

In a brief period of two-and-three-quarters hours on 30 June, the shadow of the moon will race 3,000 miles an hour across Nebraska to Pakistan. The Air Force Cambridge, Mass., Research Center of the Air Research and Development Command, and cooperating agencies, will man observation posts and complicated instruments and recording devices at a dozen sites ranging from sub-arctic to sub-tropical areas across the span of the eclipse.

The most significant observations the scientists hope to record will concern the measuring of distance between North America and Europe. The most intensive work at the sites will take place during a period of only 3½ minutes, which includes the few moments prior to, during and after the total eclipse phases.

Capt. Ralph J. Ford, Air Force officer assigned to the Geophysics Research Directorate, AFRC, is Project Scientist for the eclipse expeditions and observations. Officials from AFRC and other groups have spent a year in making plans to view the eclipse. They won't have an opportunity to study another total eclipse that spans North America and Europe until the year 2151.

TTAF Changes Staff Set-Up

Technical Training Air Force (TTAF) headquarters at Gulfport, Miss., has announced establishment of a new staff activity, Wing Plans and Programs, to replace Wing Training and Operations at its seven technical training bases.

Plans and Programs will be composed of a Manpower Management Division, and a Project Planning Division. Manpower Management will be transferred in its entirety from Wing Personnel and will continue its present mission.

Project Planning Division will monitor base-wide equipment, facilities, construction status and requirements, and will control all on and off base plans and programs.

The directed functions of the old Training and Operations sections, as outlined in AFR 24-2, will either be assigned to Plans and Programs or be placed in other staff activities at the discretion of the Wing Commander.

1380 Lts. Promoted To Temp. Capts.

Stand and Fight! It is now apparent that Senator McCarthy has put President Eisenhower, as well as Secretary of the Army Stevens, in a spot where they must either retreat from their position that Service personnel must not be subjected to abuse and insult or else they must fight in both words and action.

Thus far, both Mr. Stevens and the President have conducted themselves as gentlemen among gentlemen. Mr. Stevens was taken in by what he tried to treat as a gentlemen's agreement, i.e. that the McCarthy subcommittee would refrain from abusing and insulting military witnesses. This understanding was confirmed by others present but was rejected by Senator McCarthy as "false." General Eisenhower then issued a soft-spoken statement, not mentioning Senator McCarthy, but laying down principles of gentlemanly conduct which have guided him throughout his career and which, one would think, constituted a code of official relationship acceptable to all. To this Senator McCarthy replied: "If a stupid, arrogant or witless man in a position of power who appears before our committee is found aiding the Communist Party, he will be exposed. The fact that he might be a general places him in no special class so far as I am concerned."

What now? Senator McCarthy has arrogantly rejected the code of conduct offered by the President and his party leader. It is evident that he is rolling up his sleeves to give a professional working-over to any military witness unlucky enough to be ordered before his committee. With this clear warning of what is to come, will the President permit it or will he exercise his Constitutional powers as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy and direct that they not be subjected to morale-shattering humiliation? Suppose the President should back up Secretary Stevens' stand that the Army Chief would appear personally but, under certain circumstances, would not permit his officers to testify? If the officers then were summoned but failed to appear, Senator McCarthy could ask the Senate to cite them for contempt. Assuming that the Senate supported him and held them in contempt, the case would then be turned over to the Department of Justice for prosecution. Then, the whole affair is back in an executive agency operating under the President.

In his message to Congress last April, President Eisenhower said: "Professional military leaders must not be thrust into the political arena to become the prey of partisan politics." He contended that the integrity of the military profession must be protected and responsibility must rest entirely on politically accountable civilian officials.

Now is the time to test those principles.

Hopeful Signs. The Report of the House Armed Services Committee on the Arends bill—the first major personnel measure to be acted upon by a Congressional Committee in this session—reveals an attitude and an understanding that instill the Services with hope for the future.

The content of the measure is, of course, important. It is designed to set limitations upon the number of officers that may hold temporary commissions in each grade and it restores the statutory rights to voluntary retirement. Its provisions have the official support of all the Armed Services.

But important as is the actual legislation, it is the Committee's approach as set forth in the report accompanying the bill that is most inspiring.

First, the report shows an appreciative understanding of the current problem of the lack of career incentives and makes frequent references to the need for improvement in order that suitable officers may be attracted and retained.

SATURDAY, 6 MARCH 1954

Second, the report reveals a determination to fight the quickie legislative amendments on appropriation bills, from which has arisen so much harm. In fact the prime purpose of the measure is to squelch the damaging Davis Amendment which imposed severe and unrealistic limitations on promotions and the Van Zandt Amendment barring voluntary retirements. "These two limitations," say the committee, "are often quoted by young officers who indicate that they do not desire to apply for Regular Commission because of the present drastic effect such restrictions may have on their careers."

Third, the report shows a sympathetic awareness of Service problems and credits them with honest and sincere efforts to solve them. "The Committee found that there was no abuse of promotions in the Armed Forces. In fact, the present grade distribution falls far short of actual requirements in some grades." And, again, as to voluntary retirements: "Here is a benefit or a privilege which is most appealing to young men about to enter the Armed Forces on a career basis, but likewise the statistics prove that it is a privilege not abused." How different from the exaggerated and caustic criticism used by those who supported the quickie riders on the appropriation bills!

Fourth, it stresses the unfairness of changing the rules in the middle of careers, a procedure that has led many career officers to believe that Congress does not hesitate to welch on its promises. For example, the report states in connection with the retirement proposal: "If the Congress opposes the privilege it should change the rules for those who contemplate making the Service a career in the future, but not change the rules for those who have had this benefit held out to them as one of the incentives for making a career of the Armed Services."

Thus, under the leadership of Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.), Representative Leslie C. Arends (R-Ill.), ranking Republican, and Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), ranking Democrat, this key Committee is off to a most auspicious start on a session which can be most critical to the future of the Services. With their continued active and vigorous support the outlook can be hopeful.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Reports were current this week that the Joint Chiefs of Staff have been studying for some time a consolidation of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard into one Department of National Defense. Unification of defense agencies long has had many staunch advocates in Congress, particularly among the air protagonists.

50 Years Ago—Press dispatches from St. Petersburg declare specifically that Russia will not assent to the construction and operation of an ocean cable between Japan and the American island of Guam during the present war, and for that reason the project will probably be abandoned.

90 Years Ago—Both Houses have agreed to the Report of the Committee of Conference on the bill reviving the grade of Lieutenant General.

A Service Bill of Rights

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Of the so-called fringe benefits, and second only to an equitable salary to be considered by young men before entering the Service as a career, is ultimate retirement—a benefit that has been treated lightly in the immediate past. This was evidenced by the unfair changes made in the retirement system by the pay readjustment act of 1949, changes which many of our lawmakers agreed at that time were hastily conceived and lacked proper study.

Specifically: Personnel already on the retired lists at the time of this bill's passage suffered pay losses, particularly those who had been retired for physical disability. These people were entitled to believe that they would receive increases proportionate to those on active duty, as they had in the past.

This was denied them, apparently because of a certain stigma left by the conviction of a then high-ranking officer of World War II prominence, who had also been retired for physical disability. This discrimination against a helpless group whose careers were terminated by physical disability was obviously spite legislation.

To prevent any future occurrences of this nature and to assure our future fighting men that they will receive, thirty years hence, exactly what they were promised at the time of entering Service, a "Bill of Rights" of some sort should be drawn up and made sufficiently binding that it cannot be changed by whim.

This Bill should provide, among many other things, that the active-duty pay shall keep pace with that of industry, and that all retired personnel shall participate in any Service pay increases.

RETIRED

Keep Those Swords!

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your correspondent ("Lieutenant Colonel, Transportation Corps") who took it on himself to criticize the decision of another Service—the Navy—in re-adopting officers' swords, deserves some kind of award for gall.

His blatant (though anonymous) intrusion into the details of the uniform of another Service hardly contributes toward the inter-service goodwill for which most of us are striving.

On the subject of the sword itself, as an article of uniform—it is well recognized by serious students of institutional psychology that outward and visible symbols (such as the sword) play a great part in the establishment of stability and group morale.

As a member of the one Service which did keep its swords all along (except for the enforced World War II hiatus), I can assure this officer of the Transportation Corps that: (1) the sword serves as an excellent symbol of authority; (2) serves a useful and picturesque role in close order drill; (3) provides a handsome accessory to the uniform. And the possibilities of stumbling over one's sword (which your correspondent seems to fear unduly) are quite remote.

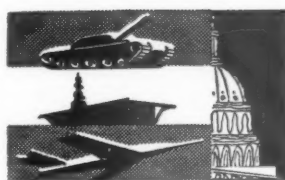

LT. COL., U. S. MARINE CORPS

That WWI Retirement

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have read with interest letter from "Reservist" in JOURNAL 27 February 1954. I am a regular army officer retired with World War I service but only draw 65% retired pay based on over 26 years service. If "Reservist" knows of any law which makes it mandatory to give WWI officers 75% under new pay bill passed in '49, I would like to know it because Finance says "they ain't no such law." Senator Kefauver introduced such a bill but I don't believe it has ever come out of Committee.

COLONEL, REGULAR

defense ON CAPITOL HILL

ALMOST EIGHT THOUSAND Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps officers are serving in assignments not directly connected with their own Service. In reporting these figures, the House Armed Services Committee said any attempt to justify the present number of senior officers in the Services must take into account "the fact that the Congress has seen fit to impose additional responsibilities upon the Armed Services. Unification, foreign aid, NATO, and joint commands necessitated by efforts to build a European Army have all demanded the services of senior officers. And this has all occurred since World War II."

MERCHANT SHIP CONSTRUCTION must be stepped up or the U. S. Merchant Marine will become "a thing of the past," says Representative Charles A. Wolverton (R-N. J.). He notes that during 1953 "there was not a single contract for construction of a merchant-marine type of ship let in the entire United States." At the New York Shipyard, in his own state, he believes the need for new construction "is imperative."

SENATOR PAUL DOUGLAS (D-Ill.) wants to force a showdown in the UN on the Korean massacres of American soldiers, and the Katyn massacre of officers of the Polish army. He introduced a concurrent resolution calling for such action and said he hoped it "will receive speedy approval, and that we shall proceed at once to force organized communism to render an accounting at the bar of world opinion for these horrors."

OFFICER-ENLISTED RATIOS for each of the four Services, related in a House Armed Services Committee report, show that the Air Force has the greatest percentage of officers, followed by the Navy, the Army and the Marine Corps. In that order, AF officers at the end of the current fiscal year will comprise 13.69 per cent of total AF personnel. The Navy will have 9.98 per cent serving in officer ranks, the Army 8.5 and the Marines 7.88. All of the percentages will be increased during fiscal 1955. On 30 June 1955 they will be as follows: AF—14.20; Navy—9.99; Army—9.2; and USMC—8.25. This means, the Committee report shows, that by the end of June 1955, the AF will have one officer for every six enlisted men; the Navy will have one for every nine; the Army will have one for every 9.9, and the Marines will have one for every 11.1.

AF Academy Bill Goes To Senate Floor; 60 Days Set For Final Site Selection

The Air Force Academy bill cleared one of its final legislative hurdles this week as the Senate Armed Services Committee favorably reported the measure and recommended its passage.

The report, submitted by Chairman Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), emphasizes that the $126 million authorization provided by a Committee amendment "is intended to be a ceiling and not a floor."

Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott has told the Committee that the cost was estimated at $145 million. The report notes that if the Air Force cannot construct the Academy within the $126 million "it should request additional authority at a later date and justify the request at that time."

One such amendment makes it mandatory for a five-member commission appointed by Secretary Talbott to recommend a permanent site within 45 days after passage of the bill. The AF Secretary is given an additional 15 days in INCREASED UNIFORM ALLOWANCES for certain Naval Reserve officers are provided in a bill introduced by Representative William H. Bates (R-Mass.). Those who received only the initial uniform allowance of $100, as provided by the Naval Reserve Act of 1938, would be paid an additional uniform allowance of $150 if they reported (or report) for active duty during war or national emergency. The proposal, HR 8070, would expire on 31 Dec. 1955.

CLOSING OF ARMY base facilities in Boston has been met with opposition by the City Council there. Senator John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) presented a resolution adopted by the Council which calls for reconsideration of the decision to close the base and urges that "necessary repairs be made to assure the preservation and continuance" of its operation.

FORCED ATTRITION OF WAVES may cause the Navy some embarrassment in the weeks ahead. VAdm. James L. Holloway has told Congress that forced attrition for males will not be allowed to exceed 25 per cent because "neither the Congress nor the Navy will tolerate the excessive waste of trained manpower which higher attrition would produce." He said if it threatens to go that high he will have to "request relief." This week, however, the Navy began forced attrition of WAVES, easing out a 50-year-old WAVE veteran who, along with other WAVE LCdr.s, had been subjected to a 50 per cent attrition rate. Some Senators and Representatives may ask why Admiral Holloway hasn't requested relief for WAVES undergoing 50 per cent forced attrition if he thinks 25 per cent is too high.

FLYING SAUCERS sailed back into the news this week as Senator Francis Case (R-S. D.) disclosed that the AF believes "there is nothing in the aerial phenomena that is associated with material or vehicles that are directed against the United States from another country or from outer planets." The Senator had checked with USAF officials to find whether information was being withheld from the public. BG Joe W. Kelly replied that all information about such objects is unclassified and available. He noted that the number of unexplained sightings dropped from approximately 20 per cent in 1952 to approximately 10 per cent in 1953, and that more accurate reporting is expected to lower the figure even further.

which to make the final selection and report to the House and Senate Armed Services Committees.

In amending the measure to provide for inter-service appointment of Academy graduates, the Committee included not only the AF Academy but West Point and Annapolis as well. It was the opinion of the Committee members that this "would contribute to both the efficiency and unification of the services in the interest of national defense."

The new section provides that a graduate of any of the three Service Academies "will be permitted to state the preference of the four military services in which he desires to be commissioned."

Two limitations are imposed: One provides that the Secretary of the military department in which the graduate desires to be commissioned must give his consent; the other provides that no more than 12.5 per cent of each graduating class may be commissioned in other services.

The Southern Flank of NATO—

COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

GENERAL Alfred M. Gruenther, Supreme Commander Allied Forces Europe, is due here this week-end for the combined purpose of filling speaking engagements and of conferring as needed both at the White House and the Pentagon. It is only a week since he was in consultation with General J. Lawton Collins, plus the British and French ranking members of the NATO Military Committee (Air Chief Marshal Sir William F. Dickson and Admiral Henri Louis Nomy), at his own headquarters near Paris.

The visit of General Collins was made toward the close of the latter's extended tour of NATO nations, chiefly of the Southern Sector. Following the protocol visit to Rome, General Collins went to Naples (in company with his British and French colleagues) for consultation with Admiral William B. Fechteler, commander-in-chief of that sector, and members of his staff; then to Malta to see Lord Mountbatten, commander-in-chief of Allied Forces Mediterranean; then to the NATO installations in Greece, beginning with HALFSEE (Headquarters Allied Forces Southeast Europe) at Saloniki, and continuing for a four-day period in northern Greece which had not been so readily visible during the lively days of 1949 when General Collins, then Chief of Staff, had visited General James A. Van Fleet. Thereafter ten days were spent in Turkey, beginning at the big new base of Adana, continuing at Izmir (Smyrna) where Lt. Gen. Paul V. Kendall is commanding land forces and Maj. Gen. Robert E. L. Eaton the Sixth Tactical Air Force, and concluding at Istanbul. The importance of these visits is obvious, for the largest expansion of NATO has been in these areas, and a great deal still lies ahead in Turkey. From this sector General Collins proceeded to Paris for the meeting with General Gruenther, Lord Ismay, the Secretary General, and others and thence to Portugal for the return to Washington.

CHANCELLOR ADENAUER of West Germany, in his efforts to do all that is reasonable to swing France over to the European Defense Community proposal, has proposed a two-nation discussion of the Saar, whose ultimate national affiliation remains a prime cause of disagreement and a contributing cause to French apathy about the EDC, and worry over the prospective West German army. M. Bidault, France's foreign minister, has agreed to the discussion (but not to the proposed terms, to be sure) and the meeting is scheduled for Tuesday in Paris. The plan is that devised by Marinus van der Goes van Naters, of the Netherlands; it would transfer to a high commissioner, designated by the Council of Europe, the Saar's foreign relations and defense policy now determined by France; it would not disturb the French-Saar economic union, but it anticipates a broader European customs and monetary union in which the Saar would one day be an element. It is no German renunciation of hopes for the Saar, but it puts those hopes on ice, pending the larger German treaty which the Bonn government is most anxious to bring to pass. And it is by no means a complete answer to France's anxiety about the EDC; besides a Saar settlement, France has asked for British association with the proposed European Army, for American assurance that our troops will remain in Europe until peace is surer, and for creation of a competent European political authority in advance of the creation of the European Army.

The United States, like Britain, must take cognizance of the second and third points raised by France. But there seems reason to believe that the State Department's response will not be hurried. A Paris correspondent states that an American answer of a sort has already been forwarded—declining to make any statement of United States policy on troop-retention in France until France shall set the date for its own parliamentary vote on the German treaty. Even Premier Laniel's November assurance, that the treaty would come to a vote soon after close of the Berlin parley (which ended on 18 February) has not been supported as yet. There is justification for fearing there will be no vote now until after the Geneva conference on the Far East in late April.

INDO-CHINA, therefore, remains a key to European affairs, and will for weeks to come, and probably longer. Whether the Reds will be able to effect any considerable trouble in the field in the next month and a half is something which will be determined at Peiping. The capability is there, but the political value of another local victory, at heavy cost, is doubtful. The French Union forces have improved in strength, and French confidence at home has been appreciably heightened by the reports just brought back from Indo-China by René Pleven, Defense Minister, and General Paul Ely. They think the French Union positions are solid and the prospects fairly good—and for these reasons M. Pleven appears to look forward to the Geneva five-power meeting with real hopefulness. This is of no small interest to us, not merely because of our commitments to France, but because a Red disposition to an Indo-China settlement, however dubious, connotes a similar attitude with regard to Korea. We have been fooled too often to expect true peace in the Far East, but there begins to be apparent justification for our willingness to listen at Geneva.

PRIME MINISTER NEHRU of India contributes less than nothing to the Asian peace prospect by his outspoken denunciation of American policy in Asia. It was brought on, of course, by the American offer of arms aid to Pakistan, accompanied by President's Eisenhower's assurance that the aid is for purposes of Pakistan's defense only, and that he would consider like aid to India, if asked. Mr. Nehru coldly declined the suggested tender, denounced American aims to "dominate" Asia and rather surprisingly called for withdrawal of the American members of the United Nations military observation group in Kashmir. (We have 24 in a UN total of 96.) There is no formal response; the State Department informally offers the view that India would have to express that wish formally to the United Nations. This is a tough world for neutrals, whether by conviction or for convenience.

IN CARACAS the Tenth Conference of the Organization of American States has been under way this week without any such uprising as had been feared by nervous prophets. Certainly there has been nothing comparable to the lunatic action by a handful of Puerto Rican irresponsibles in the gallery of the U. S. Representatives' chamber last Monday—timed apparently to coincide with the Caracas assembly. Cautious talk among the delegations at the Venezuelan capital has made

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY has been held up by the controversy involving Sec'y Stevens and Sen. McCarthy. It had been thought that when the Sec'y returned from an inspection trip to the Far East, he would be able to plunge immediately into the job of acting on recommendations for changes in the Army, among them establishment of a Continental Command. But Mr. Stevens' attention was diverted, decisions were postponed. It can be expected, however, that with staff studies well along, the Sec'y soon will announce first reorganization action.

TWO THREE-STAR RETIREMENTS in the Army on 28 Feb. —Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing and Lt. Gen. Reuben L. Jenkins—have stirred speculation as to who will get new stars. If the Army follows the precedent set by the Navy and Air Force, one of the three-star vacancies would go to Maj. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson, newly designated Director of the Joint Staff, JCS. The Army is authorized 9 generals, has 8, not including General Thomas T. Handy who retires 31 March (to be succeeded by Gen. Orval Cook, USAF); is authorized 27 lieutenant generals, has 26.

STILL AWAITING Defense Dept. decision is the proposal to permit the Air Force to split its recruiting activities from the Army. One report is that the Defense Dept. is wary of potential criticism at the Capitol, where some legislators might contend such action would result in duplication. Asst. Defense Sec'y. Hannah has said, however, he feels the AF, faced with heavy recruiting requirements, should be given a chance to do the selling job on its own.

PENTAGON PLANNERS still cannot count with certainty on implementation of the Defense Dept. plan which would add 8700 officers to Army ranks in fiscal '55 to permit call to duty of thousands of ROTC graduates and at the same time avert a heavy force-out program of experienced Reserve officers. The House Appropriations Committee may balk at the added expense. Also some of its members reportedly feel the ROTC lieutenants should be utilized to strengthen the Reserve. The forthcoming Task Force Report on Reserve Forces will show a large deficiency of junior officers in Reserve units. This would fortify those who are not enthusiastic over the Defense Dept. proposal, either because of the extra expense involved or because it will deny young officers to the Reserve.

IN THIS CONNECTION, the contention by Asst. Defense Sec'y John A. Hannah that it would not be equitable if men were deferred to complete college and then were not required to serve two-year terms on active duty has less impact when it is stated, as was done by Dr. Hannah at the National War College (The Journal 27 Feb.) that a surplus will develop in the manpower pool and that all men in the draft age may not be called to duty in the next few years.

WHAT THIS MEANS is that there can be no certainty a new officer force-out program will not be required in the Army until Congress finishes action on the FY '55 money bill. Army officials are hopeful involuntary releases can be held to a minimum, but as of the moment they can offer no guarantees on this score.

MEANTIME, TOUGHER POLICIES will be enforced for overage in grade Reservists and in renewing categories. Many hundreds of officers probably will be released from EAD in this fashion during the next 12 months.

DRAFTING OF DENTISTS, much in the news of late, traces its history back to a law passed by the Congress of the Confederate States in 1864. When WWI began, the U.S. Army had only 86 dental officers; this number grew to 4,510 on Armistice Day. The Army Dental Corps, 43 on 3 March, reached a peak strength of 15,292 in WWII.

JEFF DAVIS has "joined" the U.S. Army. He is Jefferson H. Davis, great-great-grandson of the Confederate Chief, who at one time commanded what is now the 155th Infantry Regt. of the 31st "Dixie" Inf. Div. Young Jeff, a resident of Colorado Springs, Colo., was made official mascot of the 155th in a recent ceremony at Camp Carson, Colo., where the unit is now assigned. The mascot's father, is W. O. Addison Davis, USAR.

THE USMA SUPT. POST is being up-graded. A junior three-star officer, Lt. Gen. Blackshear Bryan, has been picked for the top job at the Academy, heretofore a two-star spot. The Naval Academy Superintendent has been a three-star billet for some time.

ARMY REENLISTMENTS have dipped during recent weeks, now appear to be levelling off around 20 or 25 per cent. One reason for the drop is the decision to bar from reenlistment men in the lowest mental category. Exceptions to these rules are Category Four EM who are NonComs, or hold a combat decoration, or are recommended by commanding officers for retention and are specifically acceptable to the C.O. Army chiefs acknowledge that the reenlistment restrictions will lower the re-up rate, but they insist that the improvement in quality will in the long run save both money and manpower.

ANOTHER DECISION DELAYED by the Army Sec'y's intensive preparations in connection with the Senator's allegations concerns the proposed new Army uniform. Mr. Stevens has yet to be briefed on results of the world-wide preference survey completed more than two weeks ago and on recommendations (reportedly the gray-green uniform) of CofS Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway.

SECDEF WILSON'S SPEECHES will be followed closely by military personnel in the immediate future, as they look for a statement from him on possibility of a cost-of-living pay adjustment. He is said now to be advocating such action in Government councils, in view of prospective pay raises for civilian employees of the Government.

THE ODD SITUATION whereby a member of the Armed Forces can get promoted and take a pay cut thereby came up this week during hearings on the W.O. Promotion Bill. Defense officials feel that something should be done about the strange deal, but indicated that the Promotion Bill probably is the wrong place to do it.

COAST GUARD officers are expected to join the Sword Brigade. Word this week was that the Coast Guard probably will follow the same schedule as previously announced for the Navy in wearing swords with full dress uniforms.

FIRST MORMON CHAPLAIN to be given regular duty afloat will be Lt. (jg) Edgar R. Gwynn, ChC, USNR, awaiting orders to an MSTs transport. The Navy has had 13 Mormon chaplains on its rolls.

It appears that a large majority will support resolutions expressing hostility to Communist infiltration in Latin America, if only they are sufficiently general. It is equally apparent that there is no relish whatever for resolutions injurious to Guatemala's self-esteem or over-assertion of American policy. And it is likely that a situation so clearly indicated is one which Secretary of State Dulles is too diplomatic to disturb radically. A spokesman for Peru has pointed out the solid truth that doleful economic conditions are not only crying for betterment, but are the soil in which Red sentiment most quickly develops; it appears to point to a Peruvian proposal for creating a permanent inter-American trade council in Washington (for reasons which will suggest themselves to our uneasy budgetary authorities) through which there can be devised a flexible program for bettering the Latin's economy and, at the same time, calming the political fevers visible beyond the borders of Guatemala.

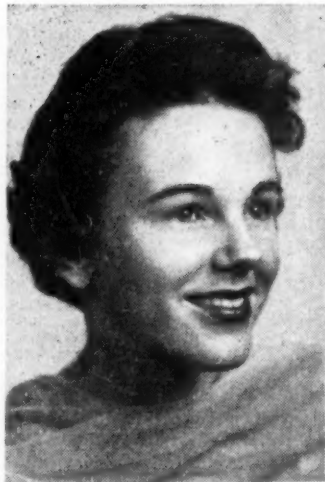

BRITAIN'S economic pressures are more intense than our own. This helps to explain the celerity with which the Ministry of Works is moving with regard to atomic power. Without slowing Britain's development of atomic weapons, the Atomic Energy Authority, now on the way to creation, will push the work on industrial power. A second reactor-breeder, much more powerful than the No. 1 plant in Cumberland, is scheduled for erection in Caithness, far north in Scotland. America's research and pioneering development in atomic power have been conducted with great boldness. It is not at all sure that in this new stage of application we are keeping pace with Britain.

SERVICE FAMILY NOTES

MISS VIRGINIA MADOLYN LARKIN, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Alwyn V. Larkin, 36-1 Revere Road, Drexel Hill, Pa., will be married in June to Mr. John D. Yocum.

Miss Larkin is a graduate of the Yokohama-American High School and attended Burdett College in Boston, Mass. Mr. Yocum was graduated from the Wharton School of University of Pennsylvania in 1946. He served as a Naval officer during WW II.

MRS. HENRY THEODORE HOPPE, III, was Miss Sarah Raleigh White, daughter of Mrs. Warren Vincent Woodruff of Williamsburg, Va., and Col. Ralph Raleigh White of Dunedin, Fla., before her marriage on 27 Feb. in Williamsburg, to Mr. Hoppe, son of Mrs. Henry T. Hoppe, II, of Newport News, Va.

SECRETARY of Defense and Mrs. Charles E. Wilson and the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Robert B. Carney and Mrs. Carney will entertain at dinner this coming week in honor of the visiting Greek Minister of Defense and Mme. Kannellopoulos.

Mrs. Eisenhower Heads Guests—Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower will head a group of distinguished guests who will attend the Fifth Annual Luncheon and Musicales of the Armed Forces Hostess Association 23 March at the Army-Navy Country Club, Arlington, Va.

The Association, formed in 1949 to welcome service wives arriving in Washington, D. C., is directed by the Army Service Center under the direction of Maj. Gen. E. K. Wright.

Three member volunteers man its headquarters in the Pentagon each day, answering telephone calls, cataloging constantly changing information, and directing a membership of 600 officers wives in welcoming and assisting newcomers to the Washington area.

The Association also provides service wives with information on baby sitters, schools, nurses, shopping, camps and other similar subjects. An overseas file is maintained to provide special information to wives accompanying their husbands overseas.

Marine Officers' Wives' Club—

The Marine Officers' Wives' Club of Washington, D. C. met 25 Feb. at the Army-Navy Country Club for a brief business meeting and luncheon, followed by an Accessory Style Show.

During the social hour which preceded luncheon, the president, Mrs. Reginald H. Ridgely, Jr. and the honorary president, Mrs. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., wife of the Commandant of the Marine Corps, introduced club members to the two distinguished guests, Mrs. Clifton B. Cates and Mrs. Murrey L. Royar, who were the very first special guests to be so honored by the club. Mrs. Cates, wife of General Cates, USMC, Commandant of the Marine Corps Schools, came up from Quantico to share the spotlight with Mrs. Royar, wife of Rear Admiral Royar, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. Mrs. Royar is president of the Navy Supply Corps Officers' Wives' Club, and was of great assistance to the Marine wives in the recent establishment of their club.

Both honored guests spoke briefly, wishing the club luck and continued success, and Mrs. Cates expressed her deep appreciation at being invited, and the hope that she would continue to see the many familiar faces in the near future when General Cates retires.

Mrs. John C. McQueen, program chairman, introduced Miss Dorothy Freeman, fashion coordinator for a local department store, who spoke on current fashion trends and the timeless value of accessories.

Most talked-about feature of the luncheon was the decorative motif found as the centerpiece on each table. Appropriately planned to carry out the program theme, each table was centered with three or four miniature modernistic hat stands which displayed to advantage the most beautiful and chic in doll-size millinery, all tiny replicas of what milady may be wearing this spring. These original creations, designed and executed by the Hostess Committee, were fashioned of natural straws, pastel tulle and veiling, spring-like flowers, deep-toned satins, plaid cottons, and in a variety of styles including the pouf, the sailor, the bonnet, the cloche, and many others. Also drawing exclamations were the miniature collars, gloves, and scarves, created to match or complement the hats. After the luncheon these dainty hats and accessories were gathered up and half of them were given to JANGO for sale in its Bargain Shop, and the other half to the little girls at Juvenile Village to use for their dolls.

Receiving laurels for this imaginative table decor and other luncheon details were Mrs. Thomas A. Wornham and her Hostess Committee which included Mrs. R. G. Davis, Mrs. James C. Magee, Mrs. F. S. Wade, Mrs. Robert Taplett, Mrs. Franklin L. Smith, Mrs. Peter J. Mulroney, and Mrs. Ira E. Spieker, all wives of G-3 (Operations) officers at Marine Corps Headquarters.

All guests were given handsome little crimson and gold shields to wear as nametags, made by Mrs. William D. Porter's Welcoming Committee. An added attraction was a door-prize.

Salzburg Wives Aid Austrian

■ SALZBURG, AUSTRIA. Members of the Welfare Committee of the Salzburg Women's Club have just completed a report of the group's activities since February 1953 which indicates approximately $1,725 (45,000 ANS) dollars was spent by the club for Austrian aid during the last 12-month period. This amount does not take into consideration many boxes of food and clothing donated from the States by wholesale dealers, or clothing given here by military personnel of US Forces in Austria.

A breakdown of this sum reveals that $1,200 was spent for help to needy persons and individuals in institutions, and $524 devoted to improving facilities of three kindergartens.

The club members, all wives of USFA military and Department of the Army civilian personnel, receive information from Austrian welfare agencies as to where the group's aid can be most beneficial. Acting upon this advice, welfare committee members visit camps and homes around Salzburg to determine in which manner they are best equipped to help needy persons.

During the past year, 297 visits were made to individual's homes, or to such places as DP camps, kindergartens, and Old Folks' Homes. During this period 149 food parcels, containing flour, fat, cereal, sugar, bouillon cubes, canned milk, cocoa, candy and soup were distributed. Over 800 toys, mostly new, were given to children, and 240 boxes of soap powder and 50 boxes and 30 pounds of candy distributed.

Material totaling 442 meters, to be made into such things as diapers and pajamas, were given out, with families having one or more members suffering from TB or heart disease receiving the bulk of the pajama material.

For kindergarten children, 67 blankets were provided to cover them during rest period. Twelve new baby blankets were also given out.

Miscellaneous items, such as 120 toothbrushes, 343 cakes of soap, 11 boxes of chewing gum, and two boxes of shampoo were distributed.

On two occasions the welfare committee has provided the St. Joseph's Home of Good Shepherd for girls with knitting wool, in addition to material, as it was found the greatest need was for clothing. The Protestant Church group, composed of Austrian women, receives knitting wool and material, and after completing articles, half are returned to the Women's Club for distribution, the other half going to the Protestant needy.

At Christmas time, in addition to fruit, candy, milk, cocoa and toys, 45 new pairs of winter boots were given to local needy children.

At the Hellbrunn Old People's Home, the USFA women have endeavored to aid the people also by displaying the products made for sale by the residents in the Occupational Therapy Department. Their handiwork has been shown at Club luncheons, and needlework women have been advised of the type work saleable to USFA personnel, and are kept busy constantly making luncheon sets and napkins.

In the cases of the three kindergartens, where over $500 was spent, facilities were improved and enlarged on the advice of the Land Government. At Camp Siedenheim, and Parsch, toilet facilities were installed in ad-

Convair-Gen. Dynamics

Merger OK'd By Boards

The merger of Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft into General Dynamics Corporation, creating a vast industrial and defense complex, was approved by the boards of both companies this week.

John Jay Hopkins, chairman of both boards and president of GDC, said the merger would be voted on by the stockholders of record on 26 March at meetings of both companies on 29 April.

"As a united group," he said, "General Dynamics and Convair will represent one of the strongest arms of the free world's defense effort. We are moving swiftly in the fields of hydrodynamics, aerodynamics and nucleodynamics."

No changes in the management or among the officers of either corporation are planned, Mr. Hopkins declared, and Convair will retain its name, individual identity and organizational structure "in every respect except that it will operate within the General Dynamics group."

Holders of Convair stock will receive four-sevenths share of Dynamics for each Convair share. And, Mr. Hopkins added, to eliminate any possible dividend differences, the directors have expressed their intention of adopting and maintaining an annual rate of $3.50 per share of the new common stock so long as this is "economically feasible and constitutes prudent business judgment."

Both groups are pioneer industries. Convair goes back to the early aircraft construction days as Fleet Aircraft of Buffalo, N. Y., and GDC dates from the earliest days of the submarine as Electric Boat Company.

General Dynamics, builder of the world's first atomic-powered vessels, the submarines "Nautilus" and "Sea Wolf," has held a strong position in the aircraft industry since 1947 when it acquired Canadair Limited, Montreal, the largest plane producer in Canada.

Last week Canadair was awarded contracts by the Canadian Government for additional F-86E Sabre jet fighters and for maritime reconnaissance planes adapted from the Bristol Britannia, one of the world's largest commercial airliners. It is expected that over a period of years these contracts will total approximately $200,000,000. Canadair is also building T-33 trainers for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Convair ranks 8th among defense contractors in terms of dollar value of contracts awarded for all defense production since June of 1950.

Colombia Buys Jets

Colombia became the first Latin American country to purchase U. S. jet aircraft when it presented the Air Force with a check for $1,162,000 for six Lockheed T-33 jet trainers on 4 March.

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Burns, USAF, Assistant Vice Chief of Staff, accepted the check at the Pentagon from the Honorable Alfonso Patino, Charge des Affaires, Embassy of Colombia, in Washington.

F-89s To Test New Allison

The Scorpion F-89 interceptor is being used as a "flying test bed" to test new turbojet engines for the Air Force.

The twin-jet, all-weather ship was selected for the tests because it can accommodate the large power plants for enlarging its air intakes and engine doors.

The new engine, designated YJ-71-A-3 and manufactured by the Allison Division of General Motors, are being tested to determine their flight characteristics and general performance under varying flight conditions.

Northrop Aircraft, Inc., which is conducting these tests for the Air Force, announced that no plans are being considered to incorporate the experimental engines in future models of the F-89.

Railroads Extend Reduced

Fares Three More Months

Reduced furlough fares on the nation's railroads for military personnel traveling in uniform at their own expense have been extended to 30 June 1954, it is announced by Earl B. Padrick, chairman of the Interterritorial Military Committee, representing all railroads in the East, South and West.

The reduction in furlough fares for members of the Armed Forces would have expired on 31 March 1954, Mr. Padrick said.

This action will continue the tax-exempt round-trip fares for military personnel on furlough at the rate of 2.025 cents a mile or less, good in coaches, which means a saving of up to one cent a mile, and includes regular stopover and baggage privileges, Mr. Padrick stated.

Two Aircraft Firms Win Five Awards in Ad-Art

Two aircraft companies took five awards for outstanding art in the Ninth Annual Exhibit sponsored by the Los Angeles Art Directors' Club.

Out of 3,000 entries submitted from the eleven western states, Convair took the top awards on the consumer and trade magazine divisions.

Lockheed Aircraft won the trade magazine black and white painting award and two awards in the booklet, annual report classification.

The best consumer ad, "A Meeting of Minds . . . to win a war before it starts," featured Convair's weapons systems planning. Ren Wicks was the artist. The winning trade ad, entitled "Here's a triangle with more than three points," showed Convair's application of the delta wing configuration to both land and water-based aircraft. Charles Kuderna did the illustration. (Both ads have appeared in the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL).

Col. Emmett A. McCabe, Convair's advertising manager; Kendall J. Mau, vice-president of Buchanan & Co., and account executive, and Maurice V. Smith, art director, received duplicate awards for the winning ads.

Judges for the show were: John Entenza, editor and publisher of Arts and Architecture; Al Camille, art director, McCann-Erickson, San Francisco; Stan Galli, illustrator; Arthur Miller, art critic, Los Angeles Times, and Ted Parmelee, producer-director of United Productions of America.

Japanese To Build T-33s

For the first time since the end of WW II, Japan will soon begin the manufacture of warplanes.

Lockheed Aircraft Corporation gave to Kawasaki Aircraft Company all rights necessary to manufacture Lockheed's T-33 two-seat jet trainer and the F-94C Starfire, an all-weather jet fighter.

The contract also provides for overhaul of U. S. jet engines and their manufacture under a license agreement now being negotiated between Lockheed and the Allison Division of General Motors Corporation, which makes the engines.

Military At RCA Conference

A week-long meeting between representatives of the Army, Navy and Air Force and managers and field supervisors of RCA's government service division, ended 1 March.

The conference included discussion of plans for field engineering, systems engineering, technical publications, training devices and overall training programs.

Heading the Armed Forces representatives at the meeting were Maj. Gen. J. D. O'Connell, deputy chief signal officer, USA; Brig. Gen. W. R. Slaughter, USA Ordnance Training Command, and Brig. Gen. J. S. Willis, commanding officer, USA Signal Corps Supply agency, Philadelphia, Pa.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Merlin O'Neill

THE Coast Guard has established a policy designed to smooth out the separation of Regular enlisted personnel, who are in their first enlistment, during FY '55. The policy applies to non-rated men who have not had resident training leading to a rating designator.

The Coast Guard has divided such personnel into three categories for the purpose of maintaining an even flow in the separation rate.

In the first category are men whose enlistment expires 1 April to 18 June 1954, inclusive. Such men may elect to transfer to the Reserve on the calendar date of the expiration of their enlistment during March. In other words, if a man's enlistment is due to expire on 30 May, he may enter the Reserve and be discharged on 30 March. Those who make this choice will acquire a five-year reserve obligation under the Universal Military Training and Service Act. Men in this group who are qualified and wish to reenlist in the Regular Coast Guard must complete their first enlistment before making application for reenlistment, the Coast Guard said.

In the second category are men whose enlistment expires on 19 to 30 June, inclusive, or during July, August, or September. These men, during March, will be transferred to the Reserve on the calendar date of the expiration of their enlistment.

In the third category are men whose enlistment expires during October, November, or December 1954, and January, February, or March of 1955. These men will be transferred to the Reserve six months before the calendar date of the expiration of their enlistment.

Those in the second and third categories who are qualified and wish to reenlist will be discharged for the convenience of the government on the dates scheduled. If men falling in either category two or three have Reserve obligations, their reenlistment papers must be signed before they will be given discharges.

Men whose enlistment date falls into any of the three categories, and who are exempted from any Reserve obligation under the terms of paragraphs 5 or 6 of Personnel Circular NR 16-53, will be discharged for the convenience of the government.

The Coast Guard stressed that it is not the intent of the new policy to reduce the number of petty officers now in service. Rated personnel, the Coast Guard said, cannot qualify themselves for early release by requesting a reduction in rank.

Promotion "Judging" Handled Like Fights; But First Contest Turns Out a "Split Decision"

The 3530th Pilot Training Wing's military personnel office at Bryan AFB, Tex., has come up with a promotion plan designed "to take the personal and emotional element out of future decisions as to the man to get the stripes."

The new procedure is described as much like the New York State boxing commission's method of judging boxing matches—so many points per round with the decision at the end going to the man with the greatest total points.

Men in competition for promotion here now are judged on: Length of Service (possible 15 points); time in grade (10) points; leadership (10); military experience (5); military courtesy (5); decorations, awards and special achievements (5); efforts toward self-improvement (5); attitude (5); and general overall evaluation (15).

In February the base was given one master sergeant opening, the board of five master sergeants had evaluated the five men under consideration, it was discovered that the high two had exactly the same numerical total, 261. A vote by members awarded the "split decision" 3-2.
